ASSOCIATION
Preserve. Educate. Inspire.

FROM NEED, TO DREAM, TO REALITY.

At the Fort Bend History Association, we've been telling our county's story since 1967. It's a story that is uniquely Texan and still evolving: the Old 300, America's most diverse county, the historic Moore Home and thousands of visiting school kids — and so much more. It's understanding what brought us here, and shining a light on what makes us unique.

Until now, its centerpiece has been a non-descript, somewhat functional, but, to be blunt, uninspiring museum building.

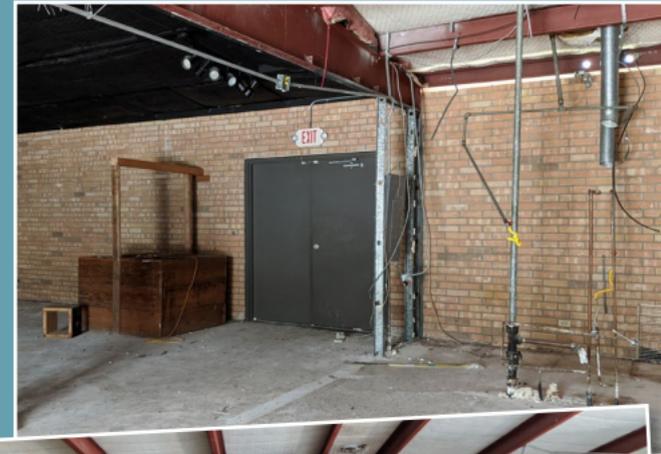

A BETTER BUILDING. A BETTER HISTORY.

Our museum began its life as a storage facility for historic artifacts. It was then converted to a museum space and has served in that role, unchanged, for years.

It has long been in need of an update. Actually, a transformation. Two years ago, we set out on a path to renovate the outside by giving it a look to match the Moore Home next door. We also wanted to do the same on the inside by expanding the space to increase program flexibility and updating exhibits that hadn't been touched in decades.

Today, even in the middle of an historic pandemic, this vision is so close to becoming reality. Plans have been drawn. Money has been raised. Permits have been obtained. And some very creative museum experts and architects have been engaged to help us transform.

In short, our community is very close to having the Museum it deserves. You can help make this happen!

YOUR ROLE IN MAKING HISTORY

Our dream is smart, efficient, creative, and flexible. It creates a better museum by day and a unique event space by night. It also comes with a $2 million price tag — which isn't pocket change but, considering what it delivers, is a pretty good bargain.

Many different groups, foundations, organizations, and individuals have agreed. To date, they've contributed $1,688,000 to our "History Rising" renovation campaign. That's over 84% of our goal and enough to allow us to get started with the plans, the approvals, and the gutting of our current space to prepare for the creation of a better space.

Here's where you come in. With matching grant opportunities still in play, we actually only need to raise $12,000 in new contributions to trigger monies that will allow us to reach our $2 million total.

$12,000: THAT'S IT

JANE LONG

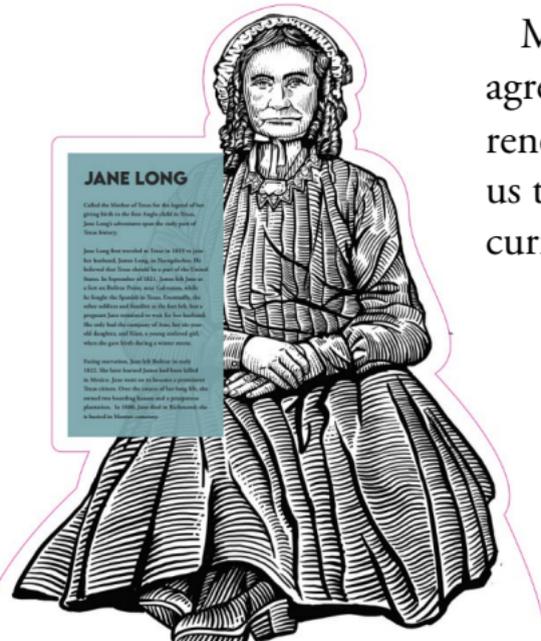

Called the "Mother of Texas" for the legend of her giving birth to the first English child in Texas, Jane Long volunteered over the early part of the 1800s.

Jane Long first married in 1812 to John A. Long, a merchant, in New York. In 1813, she moved to Texas with her husband, John A. Long, to help in the settlement of Texas. Eventually, she was called on and headed the first lady's program for women in Texas for her husband. She only had the courtesy of Jane, but she was all things and then, in every critical way, she was the first lady during a critical time.

During her lifetime, Jane Long worked to create the first Texas school for the deaf and blind in 1827. She also worked to create the first Texas school for the blind in 1827. He was also a member of the Texas State Board of Health and served as the first African American member of the board. TERRY'S TEXAS RANGERS

The 8th Texas Cavalry

Terry's Texas Rangers was a cavalry unit led by respected Fort Bend businessman and plantation owner Benjamin Franklin Terry.

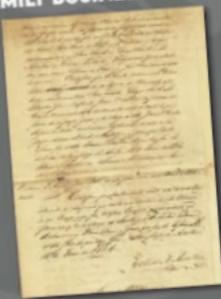

Soldiers brought their own weapons and equipment to the battlefield; the army provided the horses. Although the men were comfortable with both weapons and horsemanship, many lacked military experience. Early on, they spent much of their time drilling.

Terry's Texas Rangers fought in significant battles across Tennessee and Kentucky.

LAND GRANTS: A FAMILY BUSINESS

In 1820, Texas belonged to Spain. Armed with a Spanish passport and a big idea, American entrepreneur Moses Austin traveled to San Antonio to convince the Spanish government to let him settle American families in Texas. He returned home with a contract allowing him to sell Texas land grants to 300 American families, but he became ill on his journey back and soon died. Moses's son, Stephen F. Austin, took over the venture and began advertising the cheap, fertile Texas land.

SETTLERS ARRIVE

Settlers were already journeying to Texas by 1821, but Stephen F. Austin's work was far from over. Mexico declared independence from Spain and the new government did not recognize Austin's contract. Austin traveled to Mexico City and spent almost a year there negotiating a new contract with Mexico.

For the next decade, Austin sold land to American settlers as a land agent, or empresario. He was also responsible for keeping order and ensuring that settlers met with conditions specified by the Mexican government. Settlers were required to pledge allegiance to Mexico, speak Spanish, be "honest, industrious farmers and mechanics," and practice only the Catholic faith.

DOUBLING YOUR IMPACT

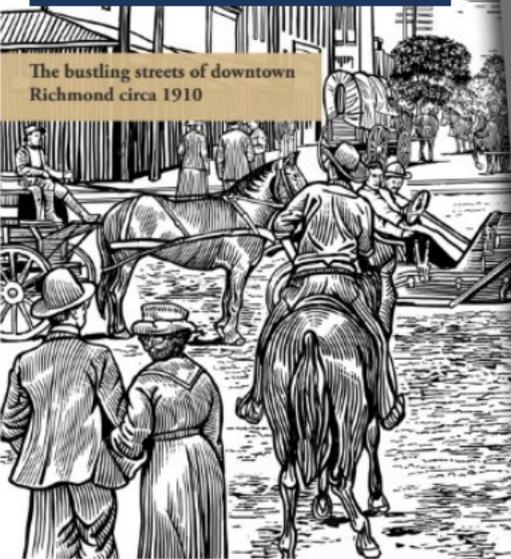

With the funds that will be triggered if we can raise just $12,000, your contribution really takes on added impact by unleashing two different matching grants.

So every dollar you give works twice as hard. Plus, the impact of what you give will be seen in a new museum whose completion date is just a few months away in March 2021!

DEADLINE: OCTOBER

There is a deadline. We need to hit our $12,000 remaining goal by this October for all of the matching funds to be activated. These gifts must be in-hand at that time (no pledges) to count toward the match.

A WORD ABOUT YOUR SUPPORT

Our “History Rising” campaign has set us down the path of an amazing journey. All of you who have contributed support — whether finances, expertise, motivation, or simply a reinforcing word — have been such an inspiration.

How often do museums get reinvented and reimagined? Without all of you, we would not have made it this far.

When we open our new space in March, we will have the opportunity to more formally recognize those who have provided support.

Looking for a specific naming opportunity? Contact Zarinah K. Poole at 281-342-1256 or zpoole@fbhistory.org for customized packages.

GIFTS GIVEN BY OCTOBER WILL BE MATCHED!
